PREFACE

In 1996, the authors became aware that neither the NSDAR (National Society for the Daughters of the American Revolution) nor the NSSAR (National Society for the Sons of the American Revolution) would accept descendants of Spanish citizens of California who had contributed funds to defray expenses of the 1779-1783 war with England. As the patriots being turned down as suitable ancestors were also soldiers, the obvious question became: "Why base your membership application on a monetary contribution when the ancestor soldier had put his life at stake?" This led to a study of how the Spanish Army and Navy had worked during the war to defeat the English and thereby support the fledgling English colonies in their War for Independence. After a year of study, the results were presented to the NSSAR; and that organization in March, 1998, began accepting descendants of Spanish soldiers who had served in California. The acceptance is based simply on service during the time period of 1779-1783 while Spain was at war with England.

We had not by March, 1998, studied the organization of the Spanish Army in the Spanish Borderlands from Texas through California. We now know how the forces were deployed and used in an effort to unify the frontier and counter the influence of English or any other foreign forces. We know that orders going to California also went to Texas, New Mexico, Sonora, and all the other border provinces of Northern New Spain. In fact, the whole frontier and bordering provinces had been united in 1776 into a military command under a Comandante-General who reported directly to the King (or at least to his ministers). The Northwestern realm, with its unidentified border with England, was a continuing concern to the highest Spanish authorities, particularly to José de Gálvez, Minister of the Interior. During 1776 while the English Colonies were declaring Independence, he reorganized the military structure of the Provincias Internas; he authorized his nephew, Governor Bernardo de Gálvez of Louisiana, to begin clandestine help to the English Colonies; and he supervised the Anza Expedition to settle San Francisco Bay. He visualized that he could regain the Floridas, lost to Britain earlier; unify the whole northwestern frontier from the Mississippi River to the Pacific; and counter the British wherever they appeared.

Indeed, Gálvez' aims were partly accomplished. He did establish California and wipe out any historic English claims from the time of Sir Francis Drake. He did recover Florida. He made progress unifying the northern outposts, but there were not enough resources to do what he visualized. Indian tribes who were already on the vast land could not be incorporated into the Spanish way of life fast enough. Events in Europe intervened and took higher priority. So, in due course of time, the land from the Mississippi River to the Pacific became American rather than Spanish.

However, we still have the Americans of Spanish descent who fought to move the frontier forward to counter the British. They helped the English Colonies to become the United States of America. They held land in trust for future expansion of the United States. Both the NSDAR and NSSAR since 1925 have accepted descendants of soldiers and sailors who served under Governor Bernardo de Gálvez of Louisiana. The NSSAR now accepts descendants of soldiers and sailors who served in any of the Spanish Borderlands from California to Florida. Our effort has been to identify the soldiers (and sailors) in Spanish service in each of the Spanish jurisdictions, plus those who were called up in the militia, plus those who contributed funds to defray wartime expenses, plus the priests who led public prayers for Spain's success during the war.

Our first two books covered California and the third Arizona, or at least the southern third of the state. This fourth study, or book, covers New Mexico, the most forward thrust of the Spanish frontier. It was also the oldest and most self-sufficient of the Spanish frontier provinces. We were able to find enlistment records for nearly all regular soldiers who served at the Presidio of Santa Fé during the war period. We did not find specific militia records, nor could we identify specific contributors to the war fund; but we probably have most of them listed in the list of all male New Mexico residents who would have been 18 or over during the 1779-1783 war period. We believe we were able to identify most of the Hispanics and Hispanicized Indians of the war period; but we recognize there were hundreds of adult males who died during the smallpox epidemic of 1781. There were also many Pueblo Indians who did not show up on any records. We believe we have nearly all the males over 18 for the EL Paso area, which was nominally under New Mexico rule during the war period.
Because of page limitations, we did not include chapters from previous books which may be helpful to the reader. Those chapters from the Arizona book include: 1. Why Patriotic Organizations Should Accept Descendants of Spanish/Mexican Soldiers Who Served in the Spanish Borderlands during the American Revolution; 2. The Spanish Borderlands during the Era of Spain’s 1779-1783 War with England; 9A. Soldiers of the Provincias Internas Who May Have Served in Spain’s 1779-1783 War with England; 9B. Other Patriots and Near Patriots Associated with the Provincias Internas of New Spain but Who Did Not Serve in CA, AZ, NM, or TX, and Who Are Not on the List of Spanish Army Key Personnel; and 10C. Additional Spanish Borderlands References.

In preparing this New Mexico study, we were assisted by Charles D. Martínez y Vigil of the New Mexico State Records Center and Archives in Santa Fe. He gave us editorial guidance and provided us with additional information and references on soldiers and alcaldes who served in present day New Mexico. He also became the first descendant of a Spanish soldier of New Mexico to join the NSSAR, being accepted in August, 1999.

Others who provided key information, assistance and support for the El Paso area were José Esquibel and Rick Hendricks. José Esquibel had posted on his web site the 1784 and 1790 El Paso censuses, which had been translated, alphabetized, and annotated by John B. Colligan and Terry L. Corbett. Rick Hendricks, through his studies of Prenuptual Investigations, provided the names and relationships of most of the El Paso area soldiers and many of its citizens. He also developed and published information on the 1784 and 1787 censuses of El Paso. These two censuses were merged and updated by John B. Colligan. Because of the work by these persons, we were able to develop a comprehensive list of El Paso male citizens over 18 during the 1779-1783 period.

The El Paso section will be updated and included in our next and fifth study, which will be for Texas as it exists today. Texas will also include other Rio Grande communities which at the time were in Coahuila, Nuevo León, and Nuevo Santander (Tamaulipas). It is probable that we will also do a sixth study of all the Northern Mexican states, where the communities shared the Spanish Borderlands heritage. Many people who became U.S. citizens are from these border states. Many share descent from Spanish soldiers who fought in the 1779-1783 war with England.

1. NEW MEXICO 1777-1785 TIME LINE AND ACTIVITIES

New Mexico was the oldest and most populated of the border provinces in 1777. Originally settled with the arrival of the Oñate Colonizers in 1598, the northern portions were abolished in 1680 with the Pueblo Revolt. Refugees fled southward to the settlements near El Paso, with some continuing on to less exposed parts of New Spain. In the Vargas Reconquest of 1693, some refugees from the El Paso area returned north to their former Río Grande homes; however, most of the Reconquest settlers were the hundred gentlemen soldiers from Spain, sixty-seven families from the City and Valley of México, some families from Zacatecas, and descendants of those who had originally settled near El Paso. These people were small farmers and ranchers, with few large grants of land or mining claims. The people, after 175 years of isolation and forced self-sufficiency were close to being one very large extended family. Among them were people of local and plains Indian ancestry who had become Christian and Spanish, called Genizaros.

The largest number of indigenous people in New Mexico were the Pueblo Indians. They were farming tribes who lived in compact, multistoried adobe structures and farmed the land along the streams where irrigation was possible. After the Reconquest of 1693, the Pueblos had allied with the Spanish against the nomadic and raiding Apaches, Comanches, Utes, and Navajos. Before the smallpox epidemic of 1781, there were an estimated 15,000 people in the pueblos, and perhaps 10,000 survived. They furnished considerable militia support to the Spanish during the War with England.

When Visitor-General José Gálvez studied the Borderland defenses of New Spain, he found New Mexico well beyond any defensive cordon he could visualize with the resources available. However, he did recognize that the people were united and cohesive, with adequate resources and willpower to defend themselves. Rather than viewing New Mexico's exposed position as a liability, he could see it as a wedge and anchor for moving the entire frontier northward from Texas to California. What Gálvez needed was a New Mexican leader who shared his strategic vision. Either he or others found that man in Lt Col Juan Bautista de Anza, Governor of Sonora and recently the successful colonizer of San Francisco Bay of Alta California. Lt Col Anza had organized, recruited, and carried out the two overland expeditions from Sonora through the California desert to Alta California. It seemed he would be the ideal person to take over New Mexico and unite it with Sonora, Texas, and Louisiana in moving the frontier northward. Indeed, this was so and would have been more successful had not men with less understanding taken over his plans for working with Yuma Indians at the critical Colorado River crossing area.

Two natural disasters affected New Mexico during the war period. A drought had started about 1777 and continued for five years. This reduced wildlife, caused crop failures, and placed Indian tribes in danger of starvation. It gave the New Mexicans certain advantages in dealing with the Moquis and other tribes, but it also made Indians more prone to raid or steal when they could. The second disaster was the smallpox epidemic of 1780/81, which killed about ten percent of the New Mexico population, with casualties more severe among the Indians crowded in the pueblos. This naturally caused many problems for isolated New Mexico areas. So little was known of treating the disease that infection was almost certain death. The epidemic had to run its course. The Indian tribes, such as the Comanches, Apaches, Utes, Navajos, etc, who lived in small bands scattered over vast areas, were less affected. Names of many of those who served in the militia, 1779-1781, have been lost because records were poorly kept at the height of the epidemic. The overburdened priests could only record the number of persons buried each day.

A. 1777. Anza Appointed Governor. From his position as Governor of Sonora, Lt Col Juan Bautista de Anza was appointed Governor of New Mexico. It does not seem that he sought the position, but he understood what he could do to carry out the Spanish strategy of moving the entire frontier northward. He did not move immediately to New Mexico but took time to study how the province could be strengthened for its new role as the Spanish spearhead moving northward and outward. He could see that the province must first be made safe.

B. 1778/79. Anza Reorganized NM Defense. New Mexico families had spread out into all available areas with isolated ranches and livestock operations. Anza consolidated these separate operations into groups with fortified towns and villas for self-protection. This irritated many influential citizens who resented loss of liberties they had previously enjoyed. They objected vehemently to higher authorities. While litigation continued, the fortified villas and towns were built and the militia organized for self defense. Anza then turned to the cause of the security problem, which was first and foremost the Comanche nation.

C. 1779/80. Campaign Against Comanches. Anza mobilized 573 troops of 600 authorized and moved against the Comanches in their heretofore sacrosanct homeland in the frontal range of the Rockies in present-day Colorado. He surprised the Comanches and defeated them in two running battles, killing their key war leaders. Two hundred Utes joined Anza and fought their own battle with the Comanches, killing many. The Comanches became more amenable to peace and moved out of their mountain strongholds onto the plains. They did not want to be surprised again. This began a long campaign to work with the Comanches rather than fighting with them.

D. 1779/80. Home Defenses Tested. While Anza's forces were moving against the Comanche homeland in the Rockies, a band of Comanches from the eastern plains raided Taos, as they were prone to do each year. However, the settlers withdrew to their fortified settlement and withstood the raid successfully. This success justified Anza's efforts to consolidate the ranches and gave the local militias more confidence.

E. 1779/80. War with England. In the midst of Anza's activities against the Comanches and Moquis, he received news that King Carlos III had declared war on England. He disseminated this information to all plazas and pueblos in New Mexico, but he could not change his immediate plans. The state of war caused a reduction in resources for all efforts on the Northwestern frontier.

F. 1780. Campaign to Moqui Country. The Moquis (Hopis) had since the 1680 uprising rejected all Spanish efforts to win them over, and they were too strong to subdue in their fortified hilltop villages. They were afflicted in 1777 by a severe drought which continued for several years, and Anza considered he had an opportunity to win them over with promises of food and help. He took a small expedition to the Moqui villages, where he found them starving and decimated. Some had fled to the Navajos for help, but had been killed or enslaved. Anza was able to establish peace with them, and a few accepted his offer to return to New Mexico. Most, however, rejected Spanish rule and especially Spanish Christianity. Enough of the Moqui people survived to occupy most of their villages, but they were never again a threat to New Mexico or to their neighbors. Navajos took over much of their traditional land, and this land problem persists to the present day.

G. 1780/81. Exploring Trade Route to Sonora. With some security established in New Mexico, Anza led a concerted effort to explore a trade route from Santa Fe to Sonora. He and others believed the Colorado crossing was secure and that soon New Mexico products could be exchanged for goods that would be coming into California. The exploration was successful and a trade route could be laid out, at least on a map. See Chapter 3 below. However, the Colorado crossing proved to be the downfall of the whole strategic concept of moving northward.

H. 1781. Impact of Yuma Massacre. The uprising of the Yumas in July 1781 and their massacre of the soldiers, settlers, and priests at the two fortified mission settlements blocked all plans for New Mexico access to California. The failure of campaigns against the Yumas in 1781 and 1782 buried the strategic concept. Much as New Mexico had been, California was destined to become a remote and forsaken outpost for the remaining Spanish and Mexican periods. Lt Col Anza was blamed for the fiasco at Yuma, even though his recommendations had not been followed. As a consequence, Anza could get little support from the Provincias Internas for other plans for frontier advancement.

I. 1781-84. New Mexico Contributions to the War Fund. As did all other frontier province governors, Anza in New Mexico in August, 1781 received the request from King Carlos for donations, along with instructions from the Viceroy of New Spain on how to implement the request. Anza appointed Commissioners for each pueblo and villa and they began collections. Most males over 18 probably contributed as the total amount collected for the province approximated the number of unexempted males of that age. See Chapter 6D, page 40.

J. 1777-85. New Mexico Economy. The New Mexico economy had developed into that of self-sufficiency. There were no successful mining operations, so the economy was based on agriculture, primarily growing livestock and food. Sheep were important in New Mexico, as wool could be packed and transported. Animals could also be used to pay tithes. For other items not available locally, the New Mexicans depended on annual trips to Chihuahua. There they exchanged their wool and other products for both necessities and luxuries. The third support for their economy was their annual trade fairs held with the Indians at Taos and other places. At these, they exchanged trade goods, horses, and food with Comanches, Utes, and Navajos for furs, buffalo robes, and other items. They then took these items to Chihuahua for exchange, along with the wool and other products they themselves grew. There was a fourth illicit entry into this system of barter and trade. It was the horses and other livestock captured by Apaches from the ranches and Presidios along the frontier, then resold to New Mexico entrepreneurs who traded them to the Indians at the trade fairs. The annual trips to Chihuahua were long and dangerous through 250 miles of desert lands better known to Apaches than to Spanish. The pack animals were loaded both going and coming and fair game for Apache raiders. Each caravan was thus closely guarded by soldiers from Santa Fé, San Elizario, and Carrizal. It was this treacherous trip that Anza was trying to avoid with trade routes to Sonora, Texas, and Louisiana.

K. 1779-85. Work with Utes. Anza gained assistance from the Utes in his 1779/80 attack on their traditional enemies, the Comanches. For reasons not clear, the Utes left the Spanish and attacked the Comanches on their own, killing many. When the Spanish were able to make peace with the Comanches, the Utes were wary, probably fearing the Comanches would be free to attack them. However, the Comanches soon left the Rockies, moving south and east onto the plains, relieving pressure on the Utes, a mountain tribe.

L. 1779-85. Work with Navajos. The Navajos were distant cousins of the Apaches and were their traditional allies; however, the Navajos adopted many Spanish practices and began to raise their own livestock rather than hunting it wild. They learned how to handle sheep and began their own wool industry. They became a supply and trading partner with the Western Apaches of the Gila River and sometimes joined them in forays against other tribes or even Spanish settlements in Pimería Alta. Anza’s task was to weaken them away from this relationship, which he gradually did diplomatically. Though he could not claim complete success, the Gileflos were no longer able to fall back to Navajo support.

M. 1777-85. Apache Campaigns. As the Apaches were in the mountains across the Northwestern frontier from Texas to California, they were essentially south of New Mexico. Although the Apaches looked forward to looting the annual Chihuahua pack trains, and even raided some remote ranches along the upper Rio Grande, they really considered New Mexico entrepreneurs as customers for their ill-gotten gains from the south. They could trade stolen horses and other loot to New Mexicans, who in turn could trade this loot to Comanches, Utes, and Navajos at their trade fairs. Anza was a sworn enemy to all Apaches, but he did not often have an opportunity to fight them during his governorship of New Mexico. He engaged some in his exploration for trade routes, and his troops were ever on the lookout for them on their trips to Chihuahua. The infrequent raids into New Mexico were handled by the war captains of the districts raided. Keeping down the illicit trade with the Apaches was a continuing problem faced by a series of New Mexico governors. In hindsight, one may suggest that some of the opposition to Anza’s centralized and fortified plazas came from those who had been using remote ranches for trading with Apaches. (There was also a thriving horse and mule ranch industry in Sinaloa and other provinces to the south which profited greatly from replacing the stolen horses and mules at the Presidios.)

N. 1783/84. End of War with England. The end of the War with England came in Sep, 1783, but the news did not reach New Mexico until early 1784. At that time the entire frontier was focused on the 1784 Campaign against the Apaches, so the news was welcome; but its main effect seemed to be to stop the voluntary contributions. Spain’s resources were depleted by the war, so there was no immediate improvement on the Northwestern frontier. California remained cut off by the closing of the Yuma area, and New Mexico remained dependent for its economy on its annual trips to Chihuahua.

O. 1777-85. Exploring Trade Routes to Texas and Louisiana. Frustrated in his effort to develop a trade route to Sonora and California, Anza considered trade routes to Texas and Louisiana. The barrier was the Comanche nation roaming over 400 miles of high plains of present-day New Mexico, Texas, Oklahoma, and Colorado. Winning them over, band by band, was a long tedious process. A mission were even established among them, but the Comanches would not settle down; and the mission failed. Anza’s work eventually paid off, and trade routes were established to San Antonio, Natchitoches, and St Louis after his governorship, as explained in Chapter 3, page 8.

P. 1777-1785. El Paso. The area we now call El Paso was under the Province of New Mexico during Governor Anza's time. It was situated in the middle of Apachería. Governor Anza inspected there before going to Santa Fe, and he kept abreast of current events through a Lieutenant Governor whom he assigned. Because of the distance and isolation, the Lt. Gov. had to act somewhat independent of outside authority, as local emergencies had to be handled expeditiously. There were necessary and continuing relations between New Mexico and the El Paso area as long as New Mexico was dependent on the annual trade trips to Chihuahua. In addition, many El Paso families were closely related to those in New Mexico. Because of this relationship, the known families of El Paso are listed, Chapter 6E, page 125.

2. GOVERNOR ANZA'S NEW MEXICO INDIAN CAMPAIGNS

Internal Defenses. Lt Col de Anza entered his governorship of New Mexico with a mandate to make it self-sufficient militarily and to move its control northward and outward to support its neighboring Borderlands provinces. He set out by reorganizing internal defenses against Indian raids, and then took the offensive against the tribes who were doing the raiding. First, he took on the Comanches, who raided from the north and from the east, and who were also blocking the way to Upper Louisiana and to Texas.

Comanche Campaign. He was authorized to take up to 600 persons, including troops, militia, and Indians. Including officers and men, there were to be 103 troops (from Santa Fé); 49 from the Santa Fé militia, including 6 Indians; 246 militia from the Villa de Cañada, 96 of whom were Indians; 156 militia of the Alcaldía de Los Queros, including 149 (Queros) Indians; and 33 militia of San Carlos, including 8 (Tegua) Indians. Thomas, the historian (Forgotten Frontiers...) believed 573 persons were on the expedition from those authorized; and this was an excellent ratio, considering normal rates of sickness and other reasons for absence. Anza, however, in an after-action report stated the total number was 645. He may had added some of the Jicarilla Apaches or other Indians who joined later.

The Comanches had established strongholds in the frontal range of the Rockies in what is now Southern Colorado. They believed they were secure because they had never seen Spanish soldiers in the mountains that far north. Lt Col Anza surprised them by moving northward through the mountain passes and staying away from the open plains. On the way north, he was joined by 200 Utes and some friendly Apaches. He did not achieve complete surprise, but he did defeat the Comanches in two running battles and killed their war chief, Cuerno Verde, and several of his close associates. The Utes left Anza and went on to kill more Comanches on their own. Anza thus broke the Comanche threat and this led to an eventual alliance between the Comanches and the Spanish of New Mexico. Lt Col Anza was promoted to Colonel and his Lt Antonio Cordero of the Santa Fé Presidio was promoted to Captain. The names of the soldiers who took part from Santa Fé are included in enlistment records and on the rosters of the period, but the names of the militia, Indian auxiliaries, and friendly Indians have not been recovered.

Taos Raid Tests Defenses. While Anza was up north attacking the center of Comanche activities, a band of Comanches from the Southern Plains to the east raided Taos. They had raided there many times before and expected full success. However, the citizens there had recently been reorganized into a fortified villa to which they retreated and successfully withstood the raid. Frustrated, the Comanches destroyed a few corn fields and withdrew. This was the first success for Anza's forceful concentration of settlers into defendable units.

Moqui Expedition. The next effort against the Indians was to try to bring the Moquis (Hopis) pueblos under Spanish control. The Moquis lived between the Navajos and Apaches in what is now eastern Arizona. It was known from the explorations of Fray García that there was a trail from New Mexico through the Moqui country to the Colorado River. It was not usable as long as the Moquis were hostile. There had been a Moqui mission before the Pueblo Revolt, but nothing had since been accomplished. A drought had started in 1777, and the Moquis had suffered for several years. Most were starving. It was an opportune time for Anza to move. On 10 September 1780, he took west a force of 126 men including 38 soldiers and 88 Indians (40 Tewas/Tlguas, 40 Quiros, and 8 converted Moquis). Fray Sebastián Fernández went along as chaplain. Fray Andrés García joined at Laguna. The Moquis offered no military resistance, but the caciques (religious leaders) were resolved to die before submitting to Christianity and Spanish rule. Some families did accept Anza's offers of food and protection.

The Moquis were never again a threat, and Anza could go on to other projects. The names of the soldiers and Indians who took part in the Moqui Expedition have not been recovered, but the soldiers were apparently all from the roster of the Presidio at Santa Fe. Anza arrived back in Santa Fé 5 Oct 1780. In his reports, Anza showed that the Esclavante Expedition in 1775 had counted 7 Moqui pueblos, 1249 families, and 7494 persons. After the drought and Ute and Navajo attacks, Anza found in 1780 only 5 pueblos, 133 families, and 738 persons. 6698 Moquis had perished.
Navaio Relations. The Navajos were generally at peace with the Spanish during the 1777-85 period, but there was continuing friction when the Spanish moved their ranches and livestock westward. Navajos raided, and Spanish settlers retaliated. Neither side could fully trust the other. As a nation, the Navajos were too strong for the Spanish to conquer, so there was a relative standoff for several years at the highest levels. The best that Governor Anza could hope for was to create a gap between the Navajos and their cousins the Gilefo Apaches to the south. Though never fully successful, Anza did stop most young Navajos from joining the Gilefos on raids into Mexico. Some Navajos did join in the 1784 and 1785 campaigns against the Apaches. Eventually, they ceased to be a dependable source of trade and supply for the Apaches.

Ute Relations. The Ute nation was primarily north and west of New Mexico settlements with ten bands in the present states of New Mexico, Colorado, and Utah. According to the historian Swadesh, they were actually trading partners with the Spanish, joining them in trade fairs near Santa Cruz or Abiquiu. They traded captives, meat, and dressed hides for horses, trade items, and grain. They did not usually come into conflict, and Utes were pleased to join Anza in his fight against the Comanches. When the Spanish made peace with the Comanches beginning in 1785, the Utes were very suspicious. However, the Spanish reduced these fears when they offered the Utes the same peace terms as they had given the Comanches.

Apache Problems. It was the Apache nation which separated New Mexico from the other border provinces, and Apaches were the common enemies of the whole frontier. The Apaches, themselves, had always been raiders within the memory of the tribe. However, they had learned from other Southwestern tribes how to plant and harvest food crops. They also had learned how to make use of all the desert and mountain plants and animals of the region. They were affected in the 1777-1785 time period by two cyclic events. The same drought which had decimated the Moquis caused a great scarcity of natural food and wild animals. The Apaches concluded they must raid or starve. For the past 100 years they had normally raided the Spanish on a live and let live basis, exacting a sort of tax in stolen animals and grain each year. The drought, however, intensified the needs and raiding became more frequent and desperate. Apaches raided as far south as Chihuahua and Durango, as far west as Tucson, and as far north as Albuquerque. As the Spanish retaliated, it became all-out war. The other natural factor was the smallpox epidemics which afflicted Nueva Vizcaya in 1779 and New Mexico in 1780 and 1781. So many died that the defenses against Apaches were weakened. The other political factor was that Spain was at war with England, and the Apaches knew there would be no big campaigns against them as long as that war lasted.

When he became Governor of New Mexico, Anza found that the Jicarilla Apaches, who had lived north of Taos, had been forced by the Comanches southward into central New Mexico. Some of these joined in Anza's campaign against the Comanches in 1779 as Spanish allies. The Cuartelejo and Sierra Blanca Apaches also cooperated with the Spanish and seemed to have merged with the Jicarillas. The main bands of hostile Apaches were in the south in the mountain ranges from Texas to the California border. They had various names and are known today as the Lipans, Mescaleros, White Mountain, San Carlos, Chiricahuas, and Gilefos. This was the background of Anza's relationship with the Apaches. Anza could not make peace with these scattered bands, and his main goals with them seem to have been to provide support to the other provinces, to protect the annual caravans to Chihuahua, to reduce any contraband trade between New Mexicans and Apaches, and to reduce Apache support from the Navajos.

Anza did mount two expeditions against Apaches of Southern New Mexico and Arizona in 1785. In the first, he had 120 horsemen, 30 foot soldiers, and 92 Pueblo auxiliaries. In the second, he led a combined force of Spanish, Pueblos, and Navajos against the Gilefos. Names of those who participated in these expeditions have not been recovered. By the end of his governorship, Anza could call upon Spaniards of New Mexico, Pueblos, Utes, Navajos, Jicarillas, and Comanches when there was an Apache threat from the south.

The entire period of Comanche contact with the Spanish is discussed. The Comanches had split off from the Shoshone tribe in present day Wyoming about 1700 and had moved south into Pawnee prairie country and Ute mountain country. As natural raiders, they were attracted to the relative wealth and livestock of New Mexico. They also learned from the Utes how to use the trade fairs at Taos and other places for reconnoitering the New Mexico territory.

The Navajos were the northern branch of the Apaches, but had gradually adopted settlements and had reduced their raiding. They were natural enemies of the Spanish when they came in conflict, but they were usually separated enough to avoid friction. The period from 1777 through 1785 was one of relative peace.

EXPLORING TRADE ROUTES FOR NEW MEXICO

By late 1780, after he had first defeated the Comanches, pacified the Moquis, and worked peacefully with the Utes and Navajos, Governor Anza believed New Mexico was secure enough to that he could continue with the overall plan to unify the Borderlands by exploring trade routes among them. He and others fully believed that the overland passage to California from Sonora was assured and that the interior provinces would benefit from trade with each other and with California. New Mexico needed trade routes with both Sonora and Texas/Louisiana in order to avoid the long, perilous trade trips from Santa Fe to Chihuahua which took place annually. The first step was to establish trade with Sonora. There had been itinerant traders who made the trip, but there was no established route.

El Cavallero Teodoro de Croix, Comandante-General of the Provincias Internas, organized the Expedition into three parts. Colonel Anza had the lead role, with a force to work from Santa Fe to Tucson. He was to be supported by a force from Sonora under Capt. Joseph Antonio Vildósola, and a second force from Nueva Vizcaya under Capt. Francisco Martínez.

Governor Anza started on 9 Nov 1780 from Santa Fe, he being authorized 60 regular troops, 55 militia, and 34 or 36 Indians. He successfully reported completion of the task on 31 Dec 1780. He did not meet his support groups while on the march. Names mentioned in his dispatches in 1779 before starting were Lt Vicente Troncoso, and soldier guides Manuel Chácon and Juan Santos Meixia of Sonora. They had been guides for Anza in Sonora; but one had died, and the other could not be located. Names of the regular troops from Santa Fe are known, but names of the militia and Indians have not been recovered.

Captain Vildósola of Presidio Las Nutrias was authorized 31 troops from Tucson, 41 from Fronteras, 21 from the Company of Volunteers, 21 from the Pickets of Dragoons, 100 Ópatas, and 50 Upper Pimas. He actually had no Pimas and only 80 Ópatas and 116 soldiers. He was to move northeast from Sonora and trek to meet Governor Anza on the march. He had numerous encounters with hostile Indians but did not meet the Governor. In his diary, he mentions actions of Lt Pablo Romero, Lt Francisco Galas, Sgt Tona, Lt Juan Antonio Carrillo, Ensign Joseph Tona, and Sgt Joseph Barela of the Dragoons. Names of others have not been identified.

Capt Martínez of Carrizal was to move northwest from the El Paso area to support Governor Anza as he passed to the north through the mountains. He was authorized to take 129 persons in total, with 17 from Janos, 13 from San Elizario, 16 from San Buenaventura, 6 from Carrizal, 29 from the Fourth Company, and 48 Ópatas. He actually set out on 7 Nov from the deserted Presidio of Velarde with 40 soldiers and 20 Ópatas. He did move north and west through what is now southern New Mexico, where he had several encounters with hostile Indians, but he did not meet either of the other columns. His diary mentions Ensign Marcos de Rialo, Lt Narciso Tapia, Ensign Manuel de Casanovia, Sgt Ygnacio Escageda of San Elizario, Capt Felipe López of Carrizal, and Lipan Apache soldier Bias de Arocha. Others who participated have not been identified.

After the tragedy of the Yuma Massacre, the trade route to Sonora was not developed, and New Mexico remained dependent on the annual trade trips to Chihuahua. However, there was some trade; and several different routes may have been used by private parties. It was noted above that there were at least 34 Indians with Anza on his expedition. They and the 55 militia could see the possibilities for trade and they apparently developed it on a small scale. The journals of the Governors of New Mexico mentioned small trade parties almost annually. The Pueblo Indians apparently developed their own trade with Sonora. Bandelier (Lange & Riley, p 237) recorded, "Up to 1859, regular caravans of Pueblo Indians from New Mexico visited Sonora annually, about October. Until they reached Magdalena, they were under one common head or captain. Then, they separated into three bands to trade. They had zarapes, buffalo hides, etc., and traded them for rebosos, oranges, etc. On the last day of November, the bands met at Hermosillo; and those who had not come in by the third of December were given up for lost, and all the rest left for home. In 1859, owing to an attempt at collection of duties, they never returned." It is not known when this trade started, but it seems not to have been officially sanctioned. It should also be noted that, as the trade caravans passed through Apacheria, there was a chance to trade with the Apaches for horses, mules, and other spoils of Apache raids into Mexico.
What also happened in New Mexico in 1781, 1782, and 1783 is that war activities shifted to other areas and Governor Anza had to work with no further support from the Comandante-General. He was able to negotiate with the Jicarillos, Utes, Navajos, and Comanches so that there was relative peace in the province. One of the successes Anza had was in reducing Navajo cooperation with their linguistic Apache cousins on the Gila River. As a result, these Apaches could not count on Navajo country as a safe haven and resupply area. Though some consideration was given to establishing a route to California through the Navajo and Moqui country, it was given up because of lack of forage along the way.

Governor Anza was clearly interested in other trade outlets for New Mexico, and he made strenuous efforts to work with the Comanches so that a route could be established across the plains to reach Texas and Louisiana. The San Carlos de los Jupees mission was even established on the Arkansas River among the Comanches for the Jupe band in Colorado, but the nomadic Comanches soon left it. Even so, Anza's work with the Comanches did pay off after he was transferred back to Sonora and Governor Gonzalez took over in New Mexico. Trade routes were indeed established, first to San Antonio, then to Natchitoches in lower Louisiana, and finally to St. Louis in upper Louisiana.

Athanasie de Mézières was one of the first Frenchmen to work with the Spanish to pacify the Indian tribes and establish trade with and among them. Pedro Vial of Lyon, France, and Louisiana picked up on the work of de Mézières and left San Antonio on 4 Oct 1786 with a single companion, Cristóbal de los Santos of the Villa de San Fernando (San Antonio). They worked across the plains, stopping for six weeks with the Tawakoni and five weeks with the Comanche. When Vial got to Santa Fe 25 May 1787, he was able to complete his diary and present his travel map to Governor Concha. Governor Concha immediately sent Capt. José Mares and two companions, Cristóbal de los Santos and Alejandro Martin, Comanche Interpreter, to San Antonio in 1787, and they were able to make the trip in ten weeks. Capt. Mares began his return trip on 18 Jan 1788 with his companion, Alejandro Martin, but he soon found a Spaniard in Indian captivity, whom he ransomed. This may have been Santiago Fernández, who made a diary of the return trip in 1788. They arrived in Santa Fe 27 April 1788.

In 1788-89, Pedro Vial made a trip from Santa Fe directly to Natchitoches in lower Louisiana, then on to San Antonio, then back to Santa Fe, a total distance of 2500 miles. When Pedro Vial started his trip from Santa Fe to Natchitoches, he joined an exploring and escort party under Santiago Fernández, who was to go as far as the Jumanos (a band of Texas Taovayas) on the Red River. Francisco Xavier Fragoso made a diary of this trip. Copies went to Manuel Merino in Chihuahua and to Governor Miro of Louisiana. Others who went on with Vial were José María Romero, Gregorio Leiva, and Juan Lucero. Clearly, Vial had shown the way, but another trip was in his future.

On a map, St. Louis appeared to be as close to Santa Fe as Texas or Louisiana, so both Governor Concha and Viceroy Conde de Revillagigedo wanted to open a trade route between Santa Fe and St. Louis. They sent Vial from Santa Fe on 21 May 1792 with companions Vicente Villanueva and Vicente Espinosa. After considerable hazard and adventures, they reached St. Louis on 3 October, where Lt. Gov. Zenon Trudeau gave them a warm welcome. In June 1793, Vial and his companions joined some traders and went up the Missouri to the Little Nemaha River, then set out across the plains to the Arkansas River, then up it and across to the Canadian River, then on to Santa Fe. This route became the famous Santa Fe trail. Though full credit must be given to Pedro Vial and his companions for these trails, they would not have been possible without the pacification work by Governor Anza with the Comanches.

When Anza went back to Sonora as Governor there, he in late 1787 sent an expedition northward against the Gileños, but also to explore approaches to New Mexico. This expedition, under Capt. Manuel de Echeagaray, reached the plains of Zuñi, but did not get to the pueblo because of lack of provisions. This route from Tucson to Zuñi was explored eight years later by Capt. José Zuñiga, but it was rough and unsuitable for cart traffic. No real road was ever developed during Spanish or Mexican times between the provinces.

4. NEW MEXICO DONATIONS TO THE WAR FUND AND OTHER CONTRIBUTIONS

As in Alta California and Sonora, New Mexico’s total donations are known; but the names of individual contributors have not been recovered. The best analysis for the contributions was done by Kieran McCarty and included in Desert Documental, pp 51-56, cited below. The royal decree, requesting the donations, was issued at the Royal Palace at San Ildefonso, 17 Aug 1780, from The King:

"The insulting tyranny of the English nation has precipitated me into a war, the exorbitant cost of which has forced me to raise the revenue exacted from the provinces of our Spanish homeland by a third. I had hoped not to have to extend this burden to my loyal subjects in America, even though they would seem to be the principal target of the grasping avarice of my enemies. Nevertheless, I have always been able to count on the faithful generosity of the voluntary contributions of those vast and wealthy colonies. To make this burden as light as possible, I have resolved to ask for a donativo of one peso from every freeman who is an Indian or of mixed blood, and two pesos from every Spaniard and those of the higher class. These last may also pay for their servants and workers and later discount the amount from their salaries or daily wages."

"Therefore, I command all of my royal officials in the Indies to announce and explain my royal decree so that all of the inhabitants of the Indies will once again have opportunity to show me their love and gratitude for the benefits I have bestowed on them. I also charge all of my church officials there to expedite this project by their persuasion and good example, for this is my will."

"All copies of this decree, duly signed by my Secretary of State and Universal Office of the Indies, who also signs below, shall have the same force as the original."

"Given at San Ildefonso, on this seventeenth day of August of the year seventeen hundred and eighty." Signed by I, The King and José de Gálvez (Minister of the Indies), and certified as a copy of the original by José de Gálvez.

It took a year for the royal decree to get through the English blockade and all the bureaucratic channels and reach Commandante General Caballero de Croix at Arispe for execution. In August, 1781, he transmitted the royal decree to each Governor, along with a list of thirteen instructions from Viceroy Martín de Mayorga for those who supervised the operation. Commissioners were to be set up for each jurisdiction, and each had to give his donors a receipt and turn in the signature of each one, showing the amount he gave, lest the accounts be pilfered. The eighth instruction forbade Commissioners from using any coercion or showing any displeasure if the prospective donor gave nothing.

In New Mexico, the Alcalde Mayor of each jurisdiction was made the Commissioner. The collections apparently proceeded without difficulty for most. On 22 Jan 1783, the pueblos of Zuni, Pecos, and the Moquinos were exempted because of hardship. In 1932, the historian Alfred B. Thomas, stated: "The above general statement of Croix’s problems are based on the writer's study of Croix’s rule as the first Commander-General of the Interior Provinces of New Spain. (When war was declared with England) Croix not only withdrew his request for men and supplies but directed the collection of donations to a war fund organized in the Mexican provinces. In New Mexico alone, 3677 pesos were collected. This is another Spanish contribution to the American Revolution not generally realized..." The collections were stopped by Commandante-General Felipe de Neve 14 January, 1784, after he learned the war with England was over. Any collections after then were for pledges made earlier. The 1787 tabulation for all of New Spain showed that almost one million pesos had been collected. McCarty noted that six to eight pesos would have, at the time, purchased an excellent riding horse. The donations therefore made a considerable dent in the war debt.

In his royal decree, King Carlos III indicated the voluntary donations were to defray expenses of the War with England. That was the most probable use made of the donations, as debts from the war had to be paid.

While no lists of contributors have been found for any area, the lists of Commissioners are known for Sonora and the Alcaldes are known for New Mexico.

There was another form of contribution to the war effort in the construction and repair of the Santa Fé Presidio. This was done by soldiers and was acknowledged by Commandante-General Caballero de Croix before there was a request from the king for donations. Still another contribution was to self-defense in the form of unpaid militia service. As this was expected from all able citizens, it is seldom mentioned as a specific contribution.

Below, in Chapter 6D, page 40, we made a beginning effort to name all male inhabitants of New Mexico who were over 18 during the war period. It seems probable that many of these persons donated to the war fund, whether they were Spanish, Indian, or of mixed ancestry. If they did not donate money, they may have donated service to the militia. There may be lists not yet identified for these activities.

5. NEW MEXICO SETTLERS AND MILITIA

Settlers. Unlike California and Arizona, New Mexico had been settled for a long time when the war with England began, with land holdings already going back 175 years. In 1782, the province was organized into 8 alcaldías: Santa Fe, Santa Cruz de la Cañada, Taos, Keres (Queres), San Carlos de Alameda (Sandia), Albuquerque, Laguna, and Zuñi. As noted in previous chapters, land holdings tended to be small family operations, except for those of the pueblos, which were communal. However, landowners were the most influential people, and tax lists for the period may indicate who they were. The landowners also tended to be heads of militia units, traders with Indians and with Chihuahua. Chapter 6D below contains names of some who are known.

Pueblos. As a result of the Rebellion of 1680 and the Reconquest of 1693, the Pueblo Indians, who lived in fortified villages, were given some autonomy; even though their pueblos were included in the larger alcaldías. They lived under their own governors, and they were also responsible for self-defense. Therefore, they had their own militia units, with their own leaders, their Capitáns de la Guerra. Frequently, these militia units would be called upon to go beyond the borders of their own land to support the common good. In fact, in almost every campaign conducted by Governor Anza, there were Pueblo militiamen, generally designated in total numbers by their home Pueblo, but without their names.

Oakah L. Jones (preface, p xi, Pueblo Warriors...) stated there are five major linguistic groups today among the Pueblo peoples, as follows:

1. Tiwa - Taos, Picuris, Sandia, and Isleta pueblos.
2. Tewa - San Juan, Santa Clara, San Ildefonso, Tseque, Pojoaque, and Nambe; also, some Tewas live at Hano on First Mesa in the Hopi Reservation.
3. Towa - Jemez; also formerly at Pecos.
5. Zuñi - Zuñi or Halona.

This listing is not exact as far as the 1779-1783 locations, but it is as close as we could come. Jones also noted that the Pueblo population during Spanish times was from 10,000 to 15,000. (Bancroft estimated that 5000 of the Pueblo people died during the smallpox epidemic of 1781.)

Genizaros. Unlike other provinces, New Mexico had a group of de-tribalized, Christian Indians in its midst for which it provided as a separate racial group. These were typically Plains Indians such as Pawnees who had been enslaved as children by Navajos or Utes or Comanches and purchased by Spanish, though there were among the Genizaros some Utes, Moquis, Apaches, and Pueblos. After living in Spanish households, these people spoke Spanish and followed Spanish customs. They were given separate areas to live in, and they received some land grants at Tomé, Ajíquiqui, San Miguel del Vado, and the old Barrio de Analco in Santa Fe. They had Spanish names, generally taken from the household where they grew to adulthood. The Genizaros were frequently used as militia, as they were good scouts and spoke languages of use to the military. They served in regular units of soldiers and militia during the 1779-83 war period.

Indian Tribal units. When the Jicarilla Apache, Navajo, Ute, or Comanche warriors joined with Governor Anza on a foray against a hostile force, they served under their own chiefs; however, they had to agree not to pillage or mutilate. When spoils and property were captured, they each received a pro-rata share as their pay. (Though there is seldom mention of it, they also received some rations during the campaigns.) Some names of chiefs are known, but there seem to be no records of the names of tribal Indians who went on campaigns.

Militia Activity. The best analysis of New Mexico militia activity can be found in Marc Simmons’ Spanish Government in New Mexico ..., page 150, where he states: “The general situation with regard to the militia in New Mexico at the end of the eighteenth century appears thus: all able men were enlisted in hometown units led by their own officers, either captains, lieutenants, or alféreces who received their appointments from the governor. Militiamen ordinarily received no pay, furnished their own arms, and, if joined to a cavalry company, they provided the necessary horses and pack animals. (There seemed to be periodic outlays from the royal treasury to make purchases of lead and powder for the militia units.) Periodically, they underwent inspections (revistas) at which time the unit’s strength and armaments were listed. The militia was called out by the sound of a drum in times of emergency or whenever a campaign was to be undertaken. Service was distributed as fairly as possible among the citizens so no individual would be overburdened. Occasionally, in special instances, the government appropriated funds to pay militiamen who were called upon to perform extraordinary service outside their own districts.

This militia arrangement was in force during the War with England and several times the militia was called out for self-defense, as in Apache or Comanche raids, or even to go on expeditions, as against the Comanches or Moquis. The militia rosters which have been found show the categories by race such as Spanish citizen, Pueblo Indian, or Genizaro. As for militia arms, there were scarcities of guns and powder, so many units fought with lance and shield. In 1782, Governor Anza ordered all citizens to provide themselves with bows and arrows within two months. (Similar orders had been in effect in New England and Virginia 100 years earlier.)

Militia Officers. The Alcalde Mayor was War Captain of his district, and this was probably his most important duty. He was also Commissioner to collect donations requested by the King. He also had a specific duty to carry out land grants in which he physically placed people on their land. The Alcalde Teniente was next in command and frequently became the actual leader of the militia when it was called into action. The names of many of these key persons, as well as other militia officers, all appointees of the governor, are known and are shown in Chapter 6D.

Soldier Descendants as Prospective SAR Members.

Descendants of New Mexico Spanish families who find a soldier ancestor on the above list may ask why they should be interested in joining the National Society, Sons of the American Revolution (NSSAR). The answer is that their soldier ancestors took part in a great revolution which shook off the European yoke and help set the course for independent America republics from the Arctic to the Antarctic. That most of the Spanish Borderlands became part of the United States rather than parts of Mexico or Cuba was a development which best belongs to history. The NSSAR makes no distinction among its members. It accepts as fellow Patriots those who served in the 1779-1783 Spanish Army in Louisiana, Texas, New Mexico, Arizona, and California. It accepts descendants of those who contributed funds to pay expenses of Spain’s 1779-1783 War with England. It also accepts descendants of those who drove cattle from Texas to Louisiana to support the Spanish Army and Naval units in contact with British forces.

What is the NSSAR all about? It is a patriotic, historical, and educational organization dedicated to perpetuating the memory of those who fought to achieve independence and establish democracy. It is non-political and non-religious. It began in 1889 and was incorporated by Act of Congress 9 June 1906. National Headquarters is at 1000 S. Fourth St, Louisville, KY 40203, telephone (502) 589-1776, email:nssar@sar.org, web site, http://www.sar.org. There are over 27,000 members. Each state has its own charter, and each state society in turn charters chapters within its territory. New Mexico, for example, has chapters at Santa Fé, Albuquerque, and Los Cruces.

Individual chapters select the patriotic and educational activities which best suit their location and membership. Among those most frequently found are veteran’s events, national holidays, civic events such as swearing-in of new immigrants, high school essay and speaking contests, ROTC awards ceremonies, and local parades. Many chapters have color guards which take part in parades and other events. Others furnish speakers for schools and youth organizations.

You can join the SAR if you are a male over 18 and can prove you descend from a qualified ancestor. You have to document, generation by generation, back to that ancestor, generally seven to ten generations. You can download application forms from the national web site or from a chapter web site. You find documentation for recent generations in public marriage, birth, and death records. Then you can use U. S. census records back to 1850, along with other records. Before 1850, in New Mexico, you have Spanish and Mexican census records, plus excellent church records for most jurisdictions. For most applicants, New Mexico will have more and better records than eastern states.

South Coast Chapter, California, has processed more Hispanic soldier descendants than any other chapter. The list of soldiers at each Presidio are on its web site http://home.earthlink.net/~wiggles/ under hispanic entries. Applications and other materials can also be downloaded. Other entries for this chapter site show typical chapter activities. If you are not on the Internet, you can contact the authors for applications and other information at Granville W. Hough, 3438 Bahia Blanca West, Apt B, Laguna Hills, CA 92653-2830.
B. 1790 Census of the Presidio of Santa Fe.

In 1790, 122 persons were on active duty. These are arranged alphabetically, with an asterisk for those known to be veterans of the 1779-1783 War with England, and a + sign for those with families. Those known to have enlisted (enl) after the war are noted. Those over 18 in 1783 may have served in the militia.

This work has focused on identifying the soldiers and male citizens over 18 who were Patriots of Spain's 1779-1783 War with England. The authors are well aware that we did not find everyone, especially those who served in the militia, those who contributed funds or work to the cause, and those who died during the 1781 smallpox epidemic. We believe, however, that we have named most of the New Mexico males over 18 for the war period in pages, 41-124, below. The known Patriots are marked with an asterisk*. The Near Patriots have no marking and were merely present with a suitable age to have served. Any person who wishes to join the NSSAR on the basis of someone listed as a Near Patriot or someone not listed at all will have to find suitable records of that person's service or contribution in Spanish records in New Mexico, Mexico, Spain, or elsewhere.

For those who do find their ancestors identified as known Patriots in this work, your application must be documented from the ancestor down through the years to you. It is usually easier to work backward from yourself to the ancestor, and that is the way the application form is laid out. Back to about 1915, you get primary source documentation for births, deaths, and marriages from town, county, or state jurisdictions. You can supplement these or any earlier primary records with secondary sources such as obituaries, published genealogies, bible records, gravestone inscriptions; but these are only necessary if there are doubts or omissions from primary records. (Incidentally, the NSSAR accepts xerox copies of primary and supporting records and never requires the originals.)

Social Security application forms date from about 1936. World War I Registration for Draft records date from about 1917. From 1920 back through 1850, U. S. census records provide basic information on all families recorded. The 1930 census will be released to the public in 2002. Actually, you can get the census records for later censuses for your own family if you know the exact place it lived during the census year. These are sometimes needed if there is no other way to prove a generation relationship.

New Mexico is a special case because of the excellent records kept by the churches and missions. Many persons may be able to document an entire SAR application with only church records, never using any public record or secondary source. All of these records are in Spanish before 1850; indeed, some continued to be in Spanish for many years. Recently, there have been remarkable efforts to put these church records on microfilm and translate and publish them. The Church of Latter Day Saints makes available through its Family History Centers microfilm copies of both the original Spanish records and translations. You should locate your nearest Family History Center and plan to use its resources if you have a problem. The New Mexico Genealogical Society publishes the New Mexico Genealogist, which includes articles of interest to specific families. This society has been very active in translating and publishing in English vital data from church records. Lists and copies of their publications can be obtained from NMGS, P. O. Box 8283, Albuquerque, NM 87198-8283, web site http://www.nmgs.org.

The New Mexico Historical Society, 1013 Mesa Vista, University of New Mexico, Albuquerque, NM 87131-1186, publishes the New Mexico Historical Review, and it frequently includes articles of genealogical interest to descendants of New Mexico soldiers and other Patriot citizens. The State Records Center and Archives at Santa Fe is a major depository of Spanish documents in the U. S. Many of the original New Mexico documents are kept there, though they are typically used only in microfilm. Church records are also there on microfilm. If you live in Santa Fe, you might do nearly all your research at one location. If you live elsewhere, you can purchase rolls of microfilm which you need.

For those who use the internet approach, several web sites have been mentioned in this work. There are others which will become known to you as you search. There will be many people interested in the same families that you are looking for. Good luck to you!! GWH & NCH.
6C. NEW MEXICO PRIESTS WHO WERE PATRIOTS OR NEAR PATRIOTS

In the King Carlos III declaration of war against England, he asked all responsible members of the clergy to lead prayers of the people for success against the English. This request was carefully carried out in California under Fray Junipero Serra, and it was likely also carried out in other Borderland provinces. Bancroft gave an incomplete listing of friars serving in NM between 1750 and 1800. Those known to have served during the war period (1779-1783) are shown with an asterisk. Those who served before 1760 and those known to have died before the war have been deleted. In his 1776 visitation Fray Francisco Atanasio Dominguez listed all the priests in charge at each mission. For El Paso, the most prolific source for names of priests serving or visiting was the Prenuptial Investigations. In 1793 when there were voluntary donations to defray expenses of the War with France, the list of priests in the custodia who contributed was included. Some priests are mentioned in official correspondence, and the microfilm roll and item number are shown. Entries for patriot priests are of particular interest to the SAR because of its Patriot gravesite marking program. (During the 1779-83 period, there were probably no more than 30 priests at any one time, even including the El Paso area. In several cases, priests visited and served on a temporary basis.)

(Note: Preview of this study by knowledgeable persons suggests that the term "Near Patriot" may cause misunderstanding. As we have used the term, we mean someone who seems to have been over 18, present and active during the war years, 1779-1783, but for whom we did not find a record confirming service or contribution. The priests without an asterisk listed above were the Near Patriots who seem to have been in the area either before or after the war. For those listed before the war, we do not know when they died. For those listed after the war, we do not know when they began their work as priests. Other records will have to be found before we can say these Near Patriots were serving during the war period. Likewise, Near Patriots (those without an asterisk) for New Mexico and for the El Paso area listed below, pages 40-180, were those males over 18 who were present during the war period, but for whom no references were found for service or contributions. Other records may be available which documents what they did, but we did not locate such records.)
Most of the regular army soldiers and priests who served in New Mexico during 1779-1783 are identified above; however, records of the militia and those who contributed funds are not so readily found. Some soldiers from outside the province also served in campaigns against the Apaches on NM territory, particularly in the southern areas. Following is an all-inclusive listing of patriots and near patriots of the period, as found in the listed references. All males over 18 are shown, with females included when helpful in identifying the males.

Basic reference: Virginia Langham Olmsted, Spanish and Mexican Censuses of New Mexico, 1750 to 1830, New Mexico Genealogical Society, 1981. The heads of families for those over 25 are shown with an abbreviated notation of residence. These males would have been 18 in 1783, old enough to have served in the militia or to have contributed to the voluntary fund. (The listing for Santa Clara is from a fragment and may be for some year between 1785 and 1798. All entries from this listing are included, but the ages shown may not correspond to other information.)

(Readers please note. It is quite difficult to combine information from several sources and get it to the correct person, especially when the name is a common one. We have tried to be accurate, but we know there will be mistakes of two types: one, we may have combined information from different persons into the same entry; and two, we failed to recognize that several entries pertain to the same person. Therefore, the reader should check all the entries for a common name such as Juan Manuel Martín, those for Juan, those for Manuel, as well as those for Juan Manuel. It may be very helpful to go to the sources for this compilation and study the complete entries. Neighbors for census records, sponsors and witnesses in marriages and baptisms, and racial designations and ages may all be helpful. For this period in New Mexico history, there were Spanish, Indian, Genizaro, and mixed blood families, all with the same common names. There are some instances where even the names of the husband and wife are the same. GWH and NCH.)

(Addendum: In the process of our investigations, we found some fragmentary pages which we could not identify at the end of Roll 11, SANMII, frames after 1240, Twitchell #830a. As they followed the summary of the 1787 El Paso census, we thought they were part of that census; however, the names do not match other El Paso censuses. The list seems to be a militia roster by plaza, possibly Albuquerque, but the ages were not consistent enough for us to estimate the year this listing was made. The names were as follows: 1st Plaza, missing page, then Vicente González-Mutil?, 60. 2nd Plaza: Vicente Durán, 55; Miguel Durán, 25; Ysidro Durán, 30; Miguel Durán, 26; Francisco Perea, 27; Miguel Muñíz, 25; Vicente García Ymcul/ymutil, 57; Erínool García, 23; Florencio Candelaria-Sorrelray, 60; Salvador Antonio Durán, 26; Juan Antonio Torres, 28; Juan García Ymcul, 57; Francisco García, 28; Francisco Carabajal, 18; José Manuel Candelaria, 28; Diego Antonio Martín, 30; José Martínez, 33; Juan Sandovál, 56; Andrés Perea, 60; Ygnacio Perea, 28; Salvador Durán, 28; Juan de Durán Ymcul, 62. 3rd Plaza: Santiago Manuel Candelaria, 50; Juan Cristóbal Candelaria, 20; Antonio Chávez, 26; Anselmo Pacheco, 30; José Candelaria, 38; Gabriel Candelaria, 60; Antonio García, 26; Juan Apodaca, 20; José María García, 38; José Gutiérrez, 18; José Perea, 36; Juan Antonio Apodaca, 35; Félix García, 37; Francisco García, 26; Eusebio García, 22; Nicolás Apodaca, 25; Juan José Apodaca, 18; Florencio Candelaria, 38; Juan Cruz García, 30; José Perea, 20; Santiago Armijo, 63; Juan de Jesús Amoror, 20; Salvador Pablo Armijo, 37; José Apodaca, 37; Fulgencio Candelaria, 56; Tomás Candelaria, 37; Pedro García, 37; Francisco Candelaria, 66; Vicente Domingo Arente, 52; Miguel García, 22; Martín Apodaca, 57; Blas Apodaca, 38; Manuel García Ymcul, 26; Antonio Bruno García, 50; Vicente García, 25; Felipe Olibarri, 30; Pedro Griego, 32; Josef Xarámillo, 66; Juan de Jesús Candelaria, 18; José Manuel Apodaca, 21; Santiago Apodaca, 20; José Martínez, 18. 4th Plaza: Antonio Montaño Ymcul, 78; Mariano Gurulé, 18; Manuel Griego Ymcul, 68; Mariano Griego, 25; Antonio Griego, 28; Lorenzo Griego, 22; Josef Griego Ymcul, 58; Pedro Apodaca, 36; Salvador Candelaria, 50; Juan Martínez, 28; Antonio Candelaria, 50; Juan Antonio Candelaria, 20; José Candelaria, 18; Manuel Cervantes, 30; Cristóbal Candelaria, 28; Francisco Candelaria, 26; Pedro López, 65; Tomás López, 22; Santiago García, 19; Manuel Martínez, 36; Melchor Martínez, 66; Pedro Marriner, 26; Antonio García, 21; José Luis García, 22; Juan Angel Griego, 36; Ramos Griego, 38; Juan García, 69; Francisco Griego, 30.)
6E. El Paso Area Patriots and Near Patriots, 1779-1783.

1. 1779-1783 Records.

The names of people in the El Paso area can partly be developed from studies made of documents from the period, and these names are included in the summary below. The studies and documents include:

Hendricks, Rick, ed. and John B. Colligan, compiler, New Mexico Premunition Investments from the Archivos Históricos del Arzobispado de Durango, 1760-1799, referred to below as premun:page number. The archives are referred to as AHAD.

Colligan, John B., "Nuestra Señora de Guadalupe del Paso del Río del Norte, Baptism Records, 1750-1782, (JCA, roll 5), and 1782-1799 (JCA, roll 6)."

2. Census of 1784. This census is listed as the "Padron general de los pueblos de esta jurisdicción del Paso hecho por el Teniente Gobernador Eugenio Fernández del año de 1784" in the Archivo del Ayuntamiento de Ciudad Juárez (microfilm roll 11, book 1, folios 275-345), at the University of Texas at El Paso.

A summary of the 1784 census was prepared by W. H. Timmons, "The Population of the El Paso Area - A Census of 1784," New Mexico Historical Review, vol LII:4(1977):311-316, which follows. In 1784, the five El Paso settlements of El Paso (EP), San Lorenzo (SL), Senecú (Sen), Ysleta (Y), and Socorro (Soc) were under New Mexico jurisdiction, with Lt. Eugenio Fernández as Lt Governor. The area was responsible for its own protection, with militia drawn from its 1220 men. Of these, 225 were Indians in tribal status of Piro, Tigua, and Suma. Spanish citizens numbered 995, including 516 Españoles (S), 117 mestizos (M), 42 Genizaros (G), 69 mulatos (Mu), 34 coyotes (C), 3 negroes (N), and 9 public officials. El Paso and San Lorenzo were largely Spanish, Senecú and Ysleta largely Indian, and Socorro mixed Spanish and mestizo. Originally, San Lorenzo had been Spanish, Senecú had been Piro, Ysleta had been Tigua, and Socorro had been Piro and Suma. Most of the people were farm workers, but El Paso had 6 tailors, 5 carpenters, 3 barbers, 3 muleteers, 3 shopkeepers, 2 merchants, 2 bricklayers, 2 silversmiths, 1 notary, 1 clerk, and a few other trades people. The breakdown by race and location shows:

3. Census of 1787. Reference: "Census of the El Paso Area, 9 May 1787" enumerated by Fray Damían Martínez and Nicolás Soler, Juárez Municipal Archives (roll 12, book 1, 1787, folios 77-142). The area was divided into Pueblo del Paso, Real de San Lorenzo, Senecú, Ysleta, and Socorro. In the summary below, only those males 22 or over are included, as this group would have been 18 in 1783 and subject to military service and encouragement to make contributions. The population included:

| Pueblo del Paso: 822 men, 827 women, 520 boys, 528 girls, 5 male slaves, 6 female. |
|-------------------------------|------------|-----------|------------|-----------|-----------|--------|
| Real                          | 67         | 70        | 63         | 45        | 70        | 76     |
| Senecú                        | 109        | 109       | 70         | 76        | 1         |

125
It is not clear why the totals for the five localities do not agree with the totals for the classes by marriage or race, unless there was faulty addition or failure to designate.

John B. Colligan transcribed, edited, and merged alphabetically the 1784 census with that of 1787 in an unpublished document, "Comparison of Two Spanish Colonial Censuses of the El Paso Area: 1784 and 1787." The males who were 18 or over in 1783 from his compilation are included below.

4. Censuses of 1788 and 1790 were researched by John B. Colligan and Terry L. Corbett and placed on the internet as "A Guide to the 1788 and 1790 Censuses of El Paso del Norte Arranged Alphabetically and Listed to Indicate Possible Family Groupings" available at: (note _ between indigo and blue in this email address) http://pages.prodigy.net/indigo_blue/epcensus1.htm Marriage records are shown in addition to other family information for each male identified. Those males over 23 in 1788 or over 25 in 1790 are included in the summary below. The names of other males indicated to be living in the 1779-83 period are also extracted and included in the summary below. Some of the abbreviations used are DM for pre-nuptial investigations, NSG for the mission church in El Paso del Norte (present day Juarez, Mexico), gp for godparent, m for marriage, wit. for witness, and dec. for deceased. Ethnic indications are S for Spanish, M for mestizo, Mu for mulatto, C for Coyote, G for gentzaro, and I for Indian.

5. Hendricks, Rick, and W. H. Timmons, San Elizarlo:Spanish Presidio to Texas County Seat, Texas Western Press, The University of Texas at El Paso, El Paso, Texas 79968-0633. There is frequent mention of persons associated with the El Paso area. In the following listing these are shown as H:page number.

It should be noted that the Presidio at San Elizarlo was under the jurisdiction of Nueva Vizcaya, not New Mexico. Therefore, census listings for the El Paso area do not include the soldiers and families; however, many living downriver are included below because they show up in prenuptial investigations and in military correspondence. The San Elizarlo Presidio, formerly known as Presidio Nuestra Señora de las Caldas, had been at the Pueblo de Guajolol (Jiménez, Chihuahua). Ruins are west of the City of El Porvenir, Chihuahua. Another area under Nueva Vizcaya was that of the Carrizal Presidio, which had until 1773 been located at El Paso. Most of these soldiers and families were from El Paso and maintained ties there. Their names also show up in prenuptial investigations and in military correspondence. Still another Presidio mentioned in prenuptial investigations was the Presidio del Norte located opposite the present town of Presidio, TX, at the intersection of the Rio Concho and the Rio Grande.

DAR. After reading the information on pages 31 and 35, a female reader may ask if she can join the National Society, Daughters of the American Revolution (DAR), based on her descent from a Spanish soldier. The authors cannot answer that question; but we have provided all our publications to the DAR Library in Washington, DC, for research use there. We have offered to share our research with any interested DAR members. We have had some correspondence with DAR leaders in California, New Mexico, and Texas.

The DAR does accept descendants of those who served under Governor Bernardo de Gálvez of Louisiana in a category called "Louisiana Patriots." They also accept descendants of Texans who sent cattle from Texas to Louisiana to support operations of Governor Gálvez' army and navy forces. (They even accept descendants of those who served in the Louisiana militia back to 1776 - three years before Spain declared war on England!!! Their justification is that Spain began clandestine support to the Colonies in 1776.)

Any further questions on current DAR acceptance policy should be addressed to the Registrar General, NSDAR, 1776 D St, NW, Washington, DC 20006.
7. NEW MEXICO REFERENCES FOR DESCENDANTS OF SPANISH SOLDIERS WHO SERVED IN THE SPANISH BORDERLANDS DURING SPAIN'S 1779-1783 WAR WITH ENGLAND

A. TEN MOST USEFUL REFERENCES

4. Magdalena, Ricardo, ed., Catálogo XXII del Archivo de Simancas, entitled Secretaria de Guerra (Siglo XVIII) Hojas de Servicios de América, Valladolid, Spain, 1958. The alphabetical index of officers and key non-commissioned officers from each Presidio shows the legajo (record folder) which indicates where and when they served.

5. Thomas, Alfred Barnaby, Forgotten Frontiers: A Study of the Spanish Indian Policy of Don Juan Bautista de Anza, Governor of New Mexico, 1777-1787, Norman, OK, Univ of Oklahoma Press, 1932. This reference covers Anza's New Mexico campaigns with the numbers of soldiers in each expedition, but it does not have many of their names.

6. Calendar of the Microfilm Edition of the Spanish Archives of New Mexico (SANM), 1621-1821, National Historical Publications Commission, State of New Mexico, Records Center, Santa Fe, NM, 1987 reprint. Rolls 10, 11, 12, and 13 give names of soldiers and citizens mentioned in correspondence. Rolls 10 and 11 have troop reviews for Santa Fe, giving the names and duties of each soldier.

8. Colligan, John B. "Comparison of Two Spanish Colonial Censuses of the El Paso area, 1784 and 1787," unpublished, 1998. This work allows one to determine those males over 18 who were in the El Paso area, 1779-1783.

9. Hendricks, Rick and John B. Colligan: New Mexico Prenuptial Investigations from the Archivos Historicos Del Arzobispado de Durango, 1760-1799, Rio Grande Historical Collections, New Mexico State University Library, Las Cruces, NM, 1996, available from Borderlands Books. Covers 160 prenuptial investigations related to New Mexico. These investigations were required when a soldier married, and frequently mentioned as many as ten fellow soldiers who gave testimony.

10. Jose Esquibel Web Site, http://pages.prodigy.net/bluemountain1/beyondorigins.htm This web site includes the 1788 and 1790 censuses for El Paso, plus other family information, prepared by John B. Colligan and Terry L. Corbett. As the population changed fairly slowly, these censuses are great aids for identifying those who were over 18 by 1783 in the El Paso area.
